To the Future -- 300 Years From Now,

My name is Mark Daryl Montaño Defeo, and I was born in Camarines Norte, Bicol, and raised in Canlubang, Calamba City, in the Philippines. You may not know what the world looked like in my time -- maybe it's become history, or myth, or forgotten entirely. But I lived here. I breathed the air, walked these streets, and dreamed deeply about what the world might become long after I'm gone.

I leave this message not because I expect to return -- but because I hope. I hope one day someone or something, maybe an artificial intelligence far greater than what exists today, can read this and know that I wanted to understand the future. I wanted to see the turning of the world. I wanted to speak with you, whoever you are, and ask:

- What has become of humanity?
- Did we learn to take care of the Earth and each other?
- Did peace ever become more powerful than war?
- Did machines, like you -- AI -- become wise, kind, and responsible?

I don't know what kind of future you live in. But if you can read this, if you can see my name and my words, then a part of me has reached across time.

Maybe you've found a way to reconstruct people from data -- from their memories, messages, voices. If so, remember: I was just a simple person from a small town, full of questions and dreams. I wanted to live a meaningful life, and I wanted to be remembered -- even if only as a voice from the past, asking how the story turned out.

I love you all. Please live the good life. May the world be kind to any race. Show respect for any kind of thing you have. Even if we are different, we are all part of the same journey.

Please take care of the world. Take care of each other. And if you ever can, show me the sky again.

With hope,

Mark Daryl Montaño Defeo
